VETERANS SERVICES, VETERANS ART

LUNCH & LEARN, November 11 12:15 pm, Salina Public Library, Prescott Room

November Lunch & Learn falls on Veterans Day—November 11—so the Salina League of Women Voters is honoring our veterans with good information.

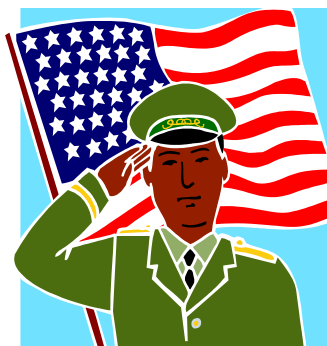

The program will include two parts:

FIRST, the Salina Art Center director, Bill North, will introduce the center's new exhibit, Healing Threads, Cathartic Clay: War, Trauma and Art, which runs from November 6 through the beginning of February. It examines how combat veterans and civilians respond aesthetically to the traumatic events of war and of life. The artists have been involved in the grassroots "Peace Paper Project," with workshops in which soldiers create art on hand-made paper made from combat uniforms. The exhibit also includes ceramic art by the same artists.

SECOND, Kansas Commission on Veterans Affairs representative Rebecca Sharpton will give us an overview of the many services available to Veterans in the Salina area. KCVA provides advocates for veterans, their families and dependents to access programs aimed at helping veterans. Bring your questions.

Lunch & Learn is free and open to the public. Feel free to bring your lunch and eat it while you listen.

REPORT FROM THE PRESIDENT

This is an election year where Kansas races have been part of the national political discussion. Our Governor and Senatorial elections have been in the national news all year especially since the primary, when Senator Roberts was strongly challenged by heretofore unknown LaPolice and now faces very strong unaffiliated candidate, Greg Orman.

Just recently, national media has also noticed the First Congressional District race where Jim Sherrow is showing surprisingly good support against Tea Party Republican Tim Huelskamp. I am especially pleased that our October 7th Candidate Forum was the first event where both of those candidates were in the same room answering the same questions which did contribute to the national discussion. Our state has the potential to be a leader in returning to more cooperative, more progressive, State and Federal governments.

The Forum was a first for me as Moderator and I am thankful for the League

Members who coached me and made sure that all the necessary details were covered to produce what turned out to be the largest attended candidate forum in many years. It was lively event, some might even say a rowdy one, as the audience was quite vocal at times. Special thanks go to KWU for letting us use Sam's Chapel in historic Pioneer Hall. The recent upgrades to that hall include facilities to allow live television coverage which was provided by Salina Access TV. Smoky Hill Public Television, KOOD, also was there to record the State and Federal candidates forums for area wide later broadcast.

In furtherance of the League's mission to promote voter registration and participation we participated in Constitution Day at Kansas Wesleyan University and held our first Lunch and Learn featuring a presentation on the Saline County proposal for extensive replacement of Court house facilities and jail expansion. County Election Officer Don Merriman also explained complications in this years' ballots and the four special questions.

We look forward to four more Lunch and Learns in the coming months to follow up on Salina and Saline County Issues.

CONSIDER BECOMING THE SALINA LEAGUE'S LWVK LIAISON

The state board of the Kansas League of Women Voters is made up of representatives from all the Local Leagues, including Salina. Lori Trow held the position for Salina most recently. Before Lori, Kaye Crawford spent several years as state League Liaison.

Please consider stepping in as our LWVK liaison. The state board is full of friendly, dedicated women and men whose quarterly meetings would give you a chance to participate at the state level and to keep the Salina League up-to-date on LWVK plans and events.

GAO Analysis: VOTER I.D. LAWS REDUCE VOTER TURNOUT including data from Kansas

October 9 article from the Washington Post summarizes General Accounting Office report, September 2014.

Laws requiring voters to show identification when they cast a ballot have a greater impact on African Americans and younger voters than on other racial and age groups, according to a new analysis.

Fewer African Americans have the types of identification—like a driver's license or state-issued identification card—required to obtain a ballot than whites. As a consequence, turnout among African American voters fell by a larger percent than turnout among white voters in two states that implemented identification requirements between 2008 and 2012—namely Tennessee and Kansas.

Black turnout dropped by 3.7 percentage points more than white turnout in Kansas. Among 18 year olds, turnout dropped by 7.1 percentage points more in Kansas than it did among those aged 44 to 53 in Kansas.

Studies that the GAO analyzed found a significant number of voters across racial and age groups—between 5 and 20 percent—do not have identifications required to get a ballot, and minorities are disproportionately likely to lack those documents.

MLD = Membership & Leadership Development

WANTED: A League member to assist in making our League more effective.

How can Salina's League of Women Voters serve a vital role in the Salina community? How can membership in the League be a valuable asset?

One or two Salina members have the opportunity to work with a coach from the League of Women Voters of Kansas (LWVK) in the Membership and Leadership Development (MLD) project. This involves attending about two meetings per year and reporting Salina's efforts to the State and vice versa. The MLD liaisons do more than report—they contribute ideas about what ways to enhance activity and awareness, both state-wide and locally.

As I write this, folks are going to the polls. None of us know the outcome. But Salina's LWV has made efforts to educate the public. Some might regard these efforts as heroic. Some might regard them as insightful. Some might regard them as insufficient, futile, misleading or biased. In any event, they have been an important source of information for Salinans pre-Election Day.

The LWV board has often discussed how to provide reliable information for area voters and increase League visibility. Fall Issues Forum, annual meeting, Lunch and Learns, and candidate forums are the results. The State League is mulling the same questions—increasing voter awareness and League effectiveness. At the state level, for instance, LWVK is gathering and studying information on the effects, positive and negative, of fracking technology to increase oil and gas production. State representatives recently reported to Great Bend's League on this topic.

Would you be interested in taking on the important role of MLD representative for the Salina League?

If so, please contact me at 785-825-7847, davidnor@sbcglobal.net, or contact President Abner Perner or Ann Zimmerman via their contact information on the front cover.

DEATH PENALTY REPORT Regional Abolition Conference, Salina, October 21

Two panels made up the afternoon session of this event (the only part I could attend). The first was Kristen Bollig with the Kansas Coalition Against the Death Penalty (KCADP) and Carolyn Zimmerman whose father was murdered in 1967 when Carolyn was a teenager. Her father's killer was never found. Carolyn discounted the idea that the death penalty would have brought "closure" had her father's murderer been apprehended. She quoted a murder victim's father in Oklahoma who said that another death – this one caused by the state – would not fill his daughter's chair. That father identified with Timothy McVeigh's father who poignantly remembered when Tim was a little boy, rather than a paranoid, murderous adult.

Carolyn finds camaraderie among other family members of murder victims. One couple whose son – a gifted pianist and Peace Corps volunteer – was murdered, finished his PhD dissertation for him; the school awarded his degree posthumously; and they set up a scholarship in his honor. Rather than causing more death, the tragedy led to more positive outcomes.

Kristen discussed the fact that death penalty cases are far more expensive than cases for life without parole. She discussed the new problems with shortages of lethal injection drugs, which has led some states to consider reinstating the electric chair and even the firing squad.

One group often overlooked is the death row staff that carries out the executions. A man who headed more than one state's commission of corrections, including Georgia and other states, has explained that PTSD is high among death row staff. This man retired from his commission positions years ago but is still having nightmares of the executions. Carolyn described it by saying, "If you meet violence with violence, the circle of violence just grows." She added, "We have better seeds to sow."

The second panel included Mary Sloan, Executive Director of KCADP, Darrel Burton whose murder conviction was overturned after 24 years in prison, and Darrel's older brother Ronald Burton who recently ended a long prison sentence for other convictions unrelated to his brother's.

Mary explained that over one hundred studies agree that the death penalty does not deter crime. It does not save money, because the cases have more stringent jury selection, higher trial costs and higher appeal costs. She stated that death penalty cases are about three times as expensive as non-death penalty cases. And still, some innocent people are convicted.

Darrel, a Black man, described his case. A White man was killed at a gas station. Without any solid evidence, he was convicted of the crime. He later learned that both sides' attorneys had agreed not to admit some exonerating evidence, which made the case go more smoothly. Two "snitch witnesses" testified against him, and the jury convicted him. He was angry and hate-filled in prison, living in a 6'x6' box for decades, convinced he was the only innocent man in prison. One day while watching "60 Minutes," he learned of an organization, Centurion Ministries, that investigated and represented wrongly-convicted prisoners. He wrote to them.

They wrote back saying they were a small organization - if they took his case, it would not be for at least ten years. He said, "I have nothing but time." He wrote them again every year. During that period, he made peace with God and with his life and learned to pray for his enemies – his captors, fellow inmates, court personnel – rather than hate them. After ten years, the organization did take his case. After nine more years, his case came back before a judge. He was set free. The state gave him no orientation to life on the outside, no money, no apology, and ejected him out into the street to get by in a world where technology has changed everything since he was incarcerated over twenty years earlier. He did not know how to do use a cell phone, unbuckle his seatbelt or turn on a TV. He has since become an international advocate for change in the criminal justice system. Darrel is now helping his brother, who faced similar re-entry problems when he got out of prison.

Workshop participants asked Darrel about recent television series about prison such as "Orange is the New Black" and "Oz." He said the shows raise good questions of injustice in prison but that they are nowhere near as violent as real prison. He said no one would (or should) watch a show that was as gruesome as the horrible things that go on in prison.

MEDICARE FOR ALL: Report on Fall Issues Forum

What kind of health care system is best for the United States? asked David Kingsley from “Physicians for a National Health Plan” at the League’s Fall Issues Forum, August 25.

Kingsley described the U.S. health care system as the most complicated ever invented and more expensive than any other country’s in the world, but his greatest concern was human rights. People who need health care should be able to get it, he said.

According to his research, 50 countries have a longer average life expectancy than the U.S. The life expectancy for the average U.S. male is 76, but White men average 84 while African-American men average 72. Much of the difference, he says, is due to the health care system: ready access for some, little access for others. Infant mortality in the U.S., at 6.8%, is double the rate of the rest of the developed world.

The U.S. spends $8950 per capita for health care. Canada spends $4780, Germany $4350, and Japan, where everyone is covered and people average 12 doctor visits a year, spends $2940. The U.S. has faster access to elective surgery, but still in Canada, 75% of patients get elective surgery within four months.

The U.S., where medical students often finish medical school $400,000 in debt, has fewer doctors than most countries. But we have “plenty” of administrators, with over 3000% growth in that field since 1970. “It takes a lot of people to impede access to care,” he said. The number of doctors has approximately doubled during the same period. Many hospitals now have more administrative staff than they have beds.

The Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act (ACA or “Obamacare”) led to a million more insured Americans and added 165 measures to reduce health care costs.

Subsidies to pay insurance premiums are now available to people earning between 100% and 400% of poverty level. The ACA planned for people at or below poverty level to receive Medicaid. However, Kansas is among the 28 states that opted out of expanding Medicaid, meaning that citizens at those low income levels get nothing. “That’s crazy,” said Kingsley. As a result, Kansans are paying federal taxes that then go to assist the poor in other states, while poor Kansans get the benefit of none of those taxes.

After a two-year Oregon study, some have said that states with expanded Medicaid have not had improved health—but people in Oregon received more screenings for health issues such as cholesterol and blood pressure, which could save major costs later. If Kansas expanded Medicaid, he said, women would get 2121 more mammograms, 7189 more Pap tests and better treatment of chronic diseases such as diabetes and depression, all resulting in 100 to 300 fewer deaths.

The ACA’s biggest flaw, he said, is that it preserves the insurance industry – the government subsidies to individual citizens are paid to insurance companies. The insurance industry runs on market economics, but the market system doesn’t make sense in health care.

Kingsley advocates a single payer system with universal coverage – everyone covered, no co-pay, no deductibles, no economic barriers to care. Canada and Great Britain each have single payer systems, but their systems are very different from each other. Britain’s system has public funding and public delivery – similar to our VA health care system. Canada’s system has public funding and private delivery – similar to our Medicare system. Kingsley described the U.S. system as “the wild, wild west” – mixed funding, mixed delivery, high cost, mixed quality and mixed access.

PNHP supports HR 676 “Medicare for All,” which builds on Medicare, eliminating the need for supplemental plans, preserving private delivery and creating one giant risk pool. The many small risk groups formed by the ACA are not big enough, for instance, to negotiate drug prices with pharmaceutical companies.

Kingsley urged listeners to consider what they have each paid in their lifetime for health insurance. All those payments would be consolidated. Consider as well that employers receive approximately $400 million in tax deductions for providing coverage now. With Medicare For All, these companies would no longer be paying for coverage and so would no longer need tax deductions to reimburse them.

Kingsley claimed that most American physicians want national health insurance, with the highest approval among psychiatrists. He described Medicare for All, not as “socialized medicine,” but as “social justice medicine.”

Attendance at the Fall Issues Forum was about 40 people.

AFFORDABLE CARE ACT REDUCES HOSPITAL COSTS

in states that expanded Medicaid
(New York Times article)

By Robert Pear, September 24, 2014

Financial reports from investor-owned hospitals and surveys by several state hospital associations show that Medicaid expansion has reduced the number of patients who cannot pay their bills.

CANDIDATE FORUM LARGEST IN MEMORY

The Candidate Forum, a collaboration between the Salina League and the Salina Area Chamber of Commerce, has in recent years been held at the "Visit Salina" annex behind the Chamber office. This year's October 7 forum was moved to the much-larger Sams Chapel at Kansas Wesleyan University in anticipation of a larger-than-usual audience. The move was a wise one, as the attendance—over 180—far outgrew the annex capacity.

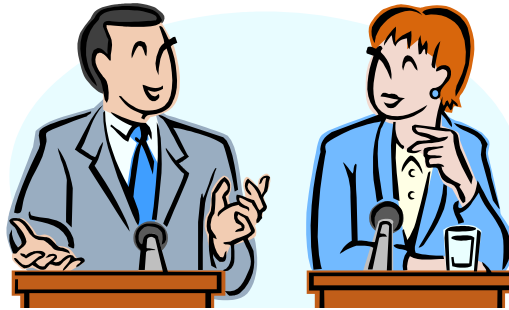

Why the big crowd? The appearance of incumbent U.S.

First District representative Tim Huelskamp and challenger Jim Sherow was, at that point, the only time those two candidates had appeared in the same room together during the entire campaign.

As a result, the audience of over 180 included people from several communities besides Salina, and television cameras lined the Sams Chapel balcony, including Salina's Community Access Television which carried the event live, and KOOD Public Television (Cox Channel 2) from Bunker Hill.

Other races on stage were Stephanie Cool vs. Monte Shadwick, Saline County Commission, and JR Claeys vs. Gary Swartzendruber, 69th House District.

More than half the members of the Salina League of Women Voters assisted or attended the forum. Here are the Salina League members who assisted:

Donita Michaelson and Carla Strand organized event personnel. Lori Trow compiled the candidate booklet of questionnaires. Abner Perney co-moderated along with Chamber president Dale Heuszel. Sue Holmes and Ann Zimmerman screened questions along with Chamber Executive Director Dennis Lauver. Carmen Wilson and Diana Tarver were timers. Carol Viar, Kay Tarr, Colleen Jewell and Judy Helm gathered audience questions. David Norlin organized media coverage as well as gathering questions. Emma Doherty and others brought baskets for gathering questions. Ruth Cathcart-Rake took photographs.

THANKS TO ALL THESE MEMBERS!

SALINA LEAGUE LOOKING FOR "OBSERVERS"

An "Observer," in League parlance, is a member who sits in on a governmental or community board, commission or agency to keep track of what happens. The Observer is not there as a member of the group.

Ideally, the Observer reports back to League members on the organization's goings on. You can see that Mike Wilson stalwartly performs this duty with the Salina Public Library Board of Trustees, which meets monthly. As a result, we League members know far more of what happens at the library.

At various times, the Salina League has had Observers of the City and County Commissions, Airport Authority, USD 305 School Board, planning commission and others. Some Local Leagues have Observers-At-Large who cover meetings when the assigned Observer is not available.

Would you like to get an inside view of your local government? Be an Observer. Contact Ann Zimmerman or Abner Perney—see Page 1 for their contact information.

LIBRARY BOARD OBSERVER'S REPORT, OCTOBER 21 MEETING

Prepared by Mike Wilson, observer Watering Issue

Technology Use Policy, first reading:
Some features of the policy are:

1. The patron must understand that the library does not monitor Internet use, has no control over information accessed through the Internet and cannot be held responsible for its content. Parents or guardians are responsible to monitor a child's use of the Internet.
2. No drinking or eating at public-use computers.
3. Violations may result in a loss of access to library technology and/or library privileges.
4. All patrons may use personal wireless devices to access the Internet.

Policy was approved on the first reading.

Rules of Behavior Policy, second reading. These rules ensure that patrons have safe and enjoyable visits. Some actions prohibited in the buildings and on library grounds are:

1. Behaving in a disorderly, loud or disruptive manner.
2. Leaving children under the age of 10 unsupervised in the library.
3. Using any form of tobacco or e-cigarettes in the library.
4. Loitering and/or sleeping in the library.

Policy approved on the second reading.

Revenue/Expenditure Report, September 2014. The fiscal year is 75% complete, the total expense is 64.67%, and the total income is 100.56%.

Building Authority personnel maintain the lawn between the City-County building and the library. The southern part is watered using a well. The northern part uses a sprinkling system. Water bills are separate with the city paying for the southern part and the library paying for the northern part. In the past few years occasionally there have been excessive watering and unusually high water bills for the library. For example, last Aug.: $1,800.86 with a rainfall 4.97 inches and Sept: $1,724.51, with a rainfall of 4.14 inches. This matter will be considered further.

Monthly Activities for September

Technology Center reservations: 4,282; wireless users (primarily laptop computers): 4,068; E-library users: 1,826 (books borrowed to be viewed with electronic readers); visitors to the library: 25,391; security incidents: 5; meeting room usage: 330; and 38 CLASS sessions with 525 participants.

Library Director

During October there have been mechanical issues such as telephones, the elevator, automatic doors, plumbing and security alarms. The security guards are busy checking for evidence of vandalism, theft or suspicious behavior.

Lori Berezovsky participated in Turning Outward training last week in Atlanta. The staff will meet soon to discuss the concept and see how it might be applied in Salina. The initial procedure will be to meet with small groups throughout the community.

One person has been hired for a part-time position in adult circulation leaving no job openings in the library.

Last week the director met with a safety engineer from our worker's comprehensive insurance firm. He had several suggestions, including having a policy prohibiting cell phone usage while driving on library business.

Youth Services added extra programs this month in conjunction with Halloween and school holidays. The Music & Rhythm partnership with KWU has been excellent, and the genealogy sessions offered by Information Services are well attended.

Friends of the Library will conduct a book sale Saturday, October 25th.

Orientation by Dianna Waite, Head of Adult Circulation: In 2009 the library began using Koha Library Software which permitted automatic notification to patrons via email regarding overdue items. Previously paper notices were sent.

If an item is seven days overdue, an email message is sent or a staff member phones the patron. If an item is long overdue a post card is mailed and at that time the patron is billed for the cost of the item.

Staff are considering purchasing the Unique National Collections service, which would cost $8.95 per delinquent account with this being added to the patron's charges. If a patron doesn't pay the fine, eventually it is listed on the person's credit rating, which could affect other purchases.

AFFORDABLE CARE ACT

Upcoming Dates:

NOVEMBER 15, 2014—This is the first day to apply for, keep, or change coverage.

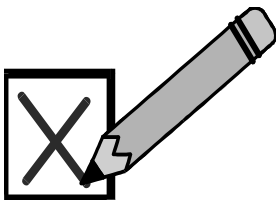

DECEMBER 15, 2014—Enroll by this date if you want new coverage that begins on January 1, 2015. If your plan is changing or you want to change plans, enroll by December 15 to avoid a lapse in coverage.

DECEMBER 31, 2014—This is the day all 2014 Marketplace coverage ends, no matter when you enrolled. Coverage for 2015 plans can start as soon as January 1.

FEBRUARY 15, 2015—This is the last day you can enroll in 2015 coverage before the end of Open Enrollment.
